[stahr - lahyt]

Self-luminous, heavenly bodies

A heavenly body, especially a planet, considered as influencing humankind and events

To shine as a star; be brilliant or prominent

Something that makes things visible or affords illumination

An illuminating agent or source, as the sun, a lamp, or a beacon

The radiance or illumination from a particular source

Having light or illumination; bright; well-lighted

To give light to; furnish with light or illumination

Father said;

She will illuminate the world with the love that I have given her.

She will shine into pure darkness and spark the life that the souls have been lacking

She will find the lost and bring them back into My Holy light

She will shine brighter than any star I have created to show those in this world that there is pure light while she leads them on My path of righteousness

She will be a beacon for many who are distracted by this world

She will support my Son Triland and be His pillar of strength

And in times and His lighthouse
